SYNOPSIS:

In the not-so-distant future, women who fail to align with a patriarchal future's idea of who they should be, how they should look, and what they should do are destined for hard time on Bitch Planet. Once there, their only chance to get home is to compete against men in a brutal sport called Megaton.

CREATORS:

Kelly Sue DeConnick (writer, co-creator): Pretty Deadly (Image), Captain Marvel (Marvel), Aquaman (DC)

Valentine De Landro (artist, co-creator): Shadowman: End Times (Valiant), Marvel Knights: 4 (Marvel), X-Factor (Marvel)

CROSS-SALE OPPORTUNITIES (If you enjoy these, you may enjoy Bitch Planet):

QUOTES:

“Bitch Planet is the kind of story that makes you feel good about being angry.”

—Gavia Baker-Whitelaw, The Daily Dot

“The series is seething and scathing. It’s commentary that doesn’t just bite back but rends, lacerates, and mutilates. Bitch Planet is Orange is the New Black minus Piper and set in the decades before A Handmaid’s Tale. It’s not a fantasy, it’s a cautionary tale.”

—Alex Brown, Tor.com

“While based on the sexploitation flicks of the ‘70s, DeConnick has created a rollicking, badass, exceedingly feminist action comic that somehow never [feels] exploitative...A surefire candidate for one of the best comics of the year, and the fourth issue isn’t even out yet.”

—Rob Bricken, io9.com
